Shahrizat, who was clad in a white baju kurung, turned up at the Jalan Duta court complex just after 2pm in a heavily tinted Proton Perdana with four police patrol cars.

She was accompanied by two employees and a police cordon was thrown around her as she walked into the complex.

The minister, who announced she would be resigning from her cabinet position on Sunday, did not flash her signature smile at photographers but headed straight for Sessions Court 1.

Shahrizat said on Sunday that she would step down from her ministerial position once her three-year term as a senator ends on April 8.

However, she will remain as Wanita Barisan Nasional and Wanita Umno chief.

In the courtroom yesterday, Wan Shahinur Izmir greeted his mother before they sat at the public gallery.

Wan Shahinur Izmir, his brother, Izran, and sister, Wan Izzanah Fatimah, are directors of NFCorp.

Wan Shahinur Izmir's siblings, however, were not present in court.

After bail was posted, Shahrizat and her son left through a side door.

They did not speak to reporters.
