SEAVEG 2016

SOUTHEAST ASIAN VEGETABLE SYMPOSIUM 2016

Vegetable for Improved Nutrition and Livelihood in Southeast Asia

6 – 8 September 2016

Putrajaya Marriott Hotel

IOI Resort City,

62502 Sepang Utara, Malaysia

Organised by

<http://seaveg2016.mardi.gov.my>

BACKGROUND

The third in the pace setting series of symposia; SEAVEG, will focus on improved nutrition and livelihoods. This symposium will highlight the critical importance of vegetables in Southeast Asia and identify technologies for increased vegetable production, marketing and consumption; to realise the potential of providing nutrition to rapidly growing and increasingly urbanised populations. SEAVEG 2016 will focus on the role of vegetables to nurture a balanced and nutritious diet, helping to alleviate micronutrient malnutrition and assure better health. Vegetables are high value crops and thus growers are receptive to acquiring skills and technologies to ensure sustainable productivity of quality vegetables to satisfy market demand, hence contributing to increased incomes and improved livelihoods. Further, vegetables require careful maintenance and are often managed by women; who are also responsible for household nutrition; therefore benefits in production and vegetable affordability directly benefit household members through improved diets.

The symposium SEAVEG 2016: 'Vegetable for improved nutrition and livelihood in Southeast Asia' comprises oral papers, poster display and a trade exhibition. The organisers strongly encourage both types of presentation and will ensure that posters receive good visibility at the symposium.

OBJECTIVES

1. To promote food and nutrition security and improved livelihood.
2. To provide a platform for participants to discuss opinions, new ideas, innovations and products.
3. To exchange ideas in addressing various issues in vegetable production and market linkages.

SCIENTIFIC PROGRAMME

- ◆ The scientific programme consists of oral and poster sessions. Tentatively, six keynote papers and two plenary papers will be delivered and a panel discussion on topics related to vegetables for improved nutrition and livelihood in Southeast Asia will be organised

Thematic sessions

1. Nutrition through vegetables

- a. Nutritional security (diet profiles and recipes)
- b. Awareness of health linkages to nutrition
- c. Empowerment of women for household nutrition
- d. Food safety (fresh and processed products)

2. Livelihoods from vegetables

- a. Profitable production systems; rural, urban and peri-urban (hydroponics, fertigation, protected cultivation, pest and disease management, nutrient/ water/ soil and environmental management)
- b. Climate, environment and market resilient cropping systems
- c. Empowerment of women through household income
- d. Profitable and sustainable nutrient-based value webs.

Panel Discussion

Specific topics will be addressed through a panel discussion which will combine oral presentations and active audience participation to further understand current scenarios and future priorities

WHO SHOULD ATTEND

- Academicians, researchers and students
- Policy makers and government officials
- Agriculture consultants / advisors
- Small scale and commercial farmers
- Non-governmental organisations and associations of agriculture
- Development partners
- Individuals involved in agricultural/ environmental/soil related matters

LANGUAGE

The official language of the symposium is English.
